HENRY CLAY AND THE GOAT .- Tae fol lowing anecdote of Henry Clay is again going the rounds of the press:

As he came out of the Capitol at Washington one day, seeing a frightened woman in the street trying to ward off the attacks of a sportive goat, he gallantly, in spite of his years and office, seized the goat by the borns The woman thanked him and sped burriedly on Mr. Clay would have liked to move on also, but the goat had its own views about the interference with his innocent amusement. As soon as the woman's deliverer loosened his hold on the two horns the animal rose majestically on his hind legs and prepared for a charge. In his own de-fense Mr. Clay now took the animal as before by the horns and thus for a time they stood, while a crowd of street boys gathered about, immensely amused at the unusual spectacle of a Senator and a goat pitted one against the other in a public street. As long as Mr. Clay held the goat by the horns all was well; but the moment the quadruped was free, came a fresh preparation for a charge. Not a boy offered assistance, but after a while one ventured to make a sug gestion.

"Throw the billy down, sir." Mr. Clay at once accepted and adopted the report of that committee, and tipping the goat up essayed to pass on. Before he and attention to examine these could fairly turn away, however, the goat was up in a lofty preparation for a new charge. Mr. Clay gave his enemy the floor once more and turned to his new adviser,
"What shall I do now?"

"Cut and run like the devil," replied the LATEST TRICK IN THIEVING .- The Na tional City Bank of Brooklyn received a tel ephone message shortly before noon Monday which they supposed came from Clapp Bros., grocers, at 979 Fulton street. Some one telephoned to the cashier that there was a check on the way to the bank for $750, and that it would be presented by a reliable district telegraph messenger boy. If they would cash it they would oblige Clapp Bros. Not long after the boy appeared, and as the check appeared to be genuine it was cashed. A man met the boy at Clapp's door, and when the boy returned with the money and delivered it to the man the latter did not enter Clapp's, but walked down the street. The boy became suspicious, and, entering the store, explained the errand he had been on, and the firm then learned that a forgery had been committed. The boy and some members of the firm then went in pursuit of the forger, but he had disappeared. The boy furnished a description of the forger, and the police were put on his track. Brothers sent to the bank at once and found two or three other checks there which had been forged, and they amounted in all to
